

Salmonella outbreak linked to Kinder products suspected to be related to buttermilk

The salmonella outbreak linked to Kinder chocolate products is suspected to be related to buttermilk used in a Belgian factory, European health officials have said..

Read More